SPOTLIGHT ON: Victoria Bond & T. R. Simon

Books give us a window into other worlds, but also a powerful window into our own. This is doubly true for children of color because we're seldom at the center of the stories we read. Being the center of the story lets us know that we can realize our dreams, that our thoughts and actions matter. — T. R. Simon (right)

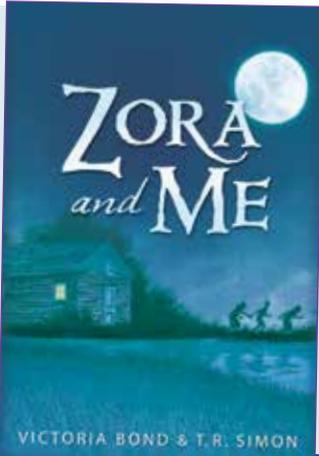

When children see themselves in stories, they discover just how much they have to share and celebrate about their own experiences with the whole world!—Victoria Bond (left)
